Ann Herrington - Publisher/Editor - Ann began working in animal welfare in 1997 when she adopted a shelter dog named Harley who changed the direction of her life. She utilized her experience working in the media and advertising for many years to help shelter animals through education and off-site adoption events. Rebecca West - Staff Writer - Rebecca is a freelance writer and editor for print and digital who loves to travel the globe. A life-long pet owner, she adores animals and has taken part in fostering dogs for military members during deployment. The Leader of the Pack Speaks!

Dearest Readers,

As we continue with the extreme changes in "life as we know it" I find solace in my beloved Tucson Dog Magazine. It is a source of positive stories of love, hope and compassion and more than ever, I need this right now and I'm guessing you do as well.

The good news of so many animals being fostered and adopted made me think of having a theme for this issue since October is "Adopt A Shelter Dog Month." I thought it appropriate to talk about all the good news and share stories about people doing good things in our community in relation to helping animals get out of the shelter environment into homes through fostering. Many people end up being "foster failures" (yes, I've done it too...lol) and fall in love with their fosters and decide to adopt them! It's a wonderful thing that makes my heart sing every time I hear about it. A shelter (as good as many of them are, filled with loving people who care) is not a place for an animal to live their lives out. They are sentient beings that we brought into our caves many, many years ago and domesticated them. They are precious gifts who have become our "best friends" and they want nothing more than to be part of our family and we need to protect the most vulnerable of them.

And talking about the most vulnerable, in our cover story, we share stories about animals in need and the people who have stepped up to helped them find their way into foster care and ultimately loving homes. Our cover dog is "Bo" who has had a very rough start in life and our hope is that Bo will find either a foster or fur-ever home who can give him all the love he deserves. Special thanks to Linda Grissom and Frank Ribeiro who have become Bo's guardian angels and are devoted to his enrichment and care while he waits for that special home. You are amazing humans!

In other stories this issue, we feature more wonderful people who are helping animals through foster care and we hope to inspire some of you who may have the time, space and love to share with more animals in need. On our Shelters, Rescues and Resources page, you will find a listing of many organizations who have dogs and cats for adoption or are available for foster care as well. Please feel free to contact them to get more information and please let us know if we have inspired you to foster or adopt as we may want to do a story about it!

We are very excited to present our 2nd Annual Holiday Cover Dog Contest to you and hope you will all participate. With the current climate in our state, we will be doing it a little bit different than last year and it is very simple to enter your dog. A big thank goes out to our sponsors of the contest, The Humane Society of Southern Arizona, The Complete Canine and Friends of PACC.

See all the information and how to enter on page 4 in this issue. Unfortunately, we have had to cancel our 2nd Annual Dogtoberfest & Adopt-a-thon due to COVID in October of this year. This saddens us deeply, but we do have our 3rd Annual WOOFstock & Adopt-a-thon booked for March of 2021 so we will keep you posted on that situation.

In closing, I would just like to say thank you to all the amazing people who are helping animals during these challenging times. All the shelter and rescue workers, volunteers, fosters and those who can adopt. You are all heroes and our inspiration for continuing to do what we do! And thank you to our advertisers for continuing to support The Tucson Dog and to you, our amazing readers; Please stay healthy and safe!

Love, Light & Laughter,

Ann

Greetings from Gracie

What is Your Dog Saying to You?

Dear Humans,

We dogs are very good communicators if you just watch and listen. In the book, "What Do Dogs Dream About?" author, Tom Kuncl looks into the mind of "mankind's best friend." Although he talks about dreams and the history of dogs, he gives some basic information you should know of how your dog is talking to you.

Below are some of the things your dog is saying to you:

"Hi, I'm glad to see you!" – This bark is high-pitched, repeated and followed with lots of tail-wagging and grinning. You probably already know this greeting. It's the one your pet uses when you come home from work or some other outing you have taken.

"Will you play with me?" – When your pup wants to play, he'll lower his two front paws, put his chest down to the ground, flatten his ears and lift his rear in the air. Dog behaviorists call this the "play bow." No one who sees it is able to resist it.

"Stay away!" – A dog warns you of possible danger with a series of low-pitched, frenzied barks that should have you up and investigating immediately.

"I'm scared?" – A scared dog crouches low to the floor, with his head down and ears flat. If he barks at all, it will be an odd sounding howl.

"Something's wrong!" – This type of warning bark is usually accompanied by growling, raised hair on the neck and flattened ears.

"I'm very sad." – We've all heard the expression "puppy dog eyes." There's nothing more heart-wrenching than the sight of those downcast eyes and drooping ears that a dog demonstrate when he's not happy. If your dog is feeling especially unhappy, he may howl. This dog needs attention and a big hug!

"I love you!" – This is the type of "dog-talk" all dog lovers live for. You know it's puppy love when you're greeted with lots of face-licking and tail-wagging. Wolves in packs use face-licking as a sign of affection and trust. When your dog drags his tongue across your face, take it as a compliment and consider yourself one lucky person!

And have you ever seen a dog smile? We do! We grin by pulling back the corners of our lips and baring our teeth. (Please don't make the mistake of confusing a grin with a snarl. If a dog has his mouth pulled back, but is showing his incisor and back teeth, he is most likely snarling.)

I hope you have been enjoying spending quality time with your dogs these days and I'll be back with more tips next time!

Peace, Love & Biscuits

Gracie

I am a laid back 8 yr-old guy who was living in a foster home with cats, dogs, and children. I loved to hang out on the bed and sleep with my foster parents at night. I'm a little bundle of joy who enjoys being petted and catching an afternoon sun puddle near a window.

I have diabetes, but I take my insulin like a champ and love my low-carb food.

GERTIE ID# A712860

CARLEY

I'm a six-year-old calico lady that needs a nice quiet one-pet home. After dad died, someone thought they were doing a good deed by leaving me outside and feeding me there, but when that didn't work out, I was brought to TALGV. After 18 months at the shelter I'm ready for a new home! Adoption fee: $45.

GRANOLA

I'm a four-year-old shorthaired tabby lady that likes other felines. A kind lady once adopted me and another shy cat, but since we had each other to "lean on," we didn't make an effort to be the kind of social companions she wanted. If you are an understanding "cat person," would you please give me another chance. Adoption fee: $45.

Fostering: Volunteers Saving Lives

Story by Brian Pettepiece Photos by Stacy Vandyke

Santa Cruz County Animal Control Officers found this pup as a stray in Nogales and hoped that someone would claim him but no one did.

It's an unfortunate reality that there are a lot of homeless dogs out there. But it doesn't have to be that way. With the work of local volunteers, dogs in need of homes all around Tucson are getting the break they deserve thanks to a network of dedicated volunteers both in Tucson and the surrounding areas.

Foster programs are all-important when it comes to finding homes for homeless dogs according to Stacy Vandyke. Vandyke is a volunteer who works with numerous shelters and rescues both in the city and the surrounding rural areas. She helps to transport dogs to and from shelters and rescues and also fosters dogs, personally fostering over 700 over the years. She described the process of finding dogs forever homes as a system of "shelter to foster to adoption". Each of three components are important but fostering makes up a large portion of the process. Because shelters have limited space, foster homes make up the difference, giving the dog more time to find their forever home, sometimes saving their lives.

It's important to delineate the difference between a "shelter" and a "rescue". Shelters typically have a physical space to hold dogs, with a building and kennels, and, in the case of some larger shelters, grants or public funding. Rescues are different. They typically aren't staffed by paid employees but volunteers who have other full-time jobs and operate their rescue out of the goodness of their hearts and their love of animals.

Here in Tucson there are a myriad of shelters and rescues doing important work such as locating homeless dogs, relocating dogs from overcrowded shelters, and placing dogs in temporary foster homes. One such organization is RAD Rescue. RAD doesn't have a physical location, rather they are a network of people who work at the logistics of getting homeless dogs in need into foster homes.

Haley Clauges is one of three members operating RAD. They currently have a regular network of about fifteen to twenty volunteers who foster dogs that need a temporary home for a few weeks to a few months. Because there are so many animals in need, Clauges said that "we're always networking for new fosters." She said that even having a few extra volunteers can make a huge difference and can literally mean the difference between life and death for some dogs. Emphasizing the importance of fostering, Clauges stated that "what dogs we can save is solely dependent on if we have a foster for them or not."

He was accepted by Hope of Deliverance, received medical care, and settled into his new foster home.

During the pandemic and shutdown, you may have heard that many shelters were emptying out of dogs. That's good news and there were a lot of adoptions happening during that time. But according to Clauges, other factors were at play as well. She said that there aren't actually less dogs on the streets during the pandemic. But a lot of shelters are limiting their intake during this time. With some shelters unable to accept more dogs because of staffing or limited hours, some of them have increased their outsourcing of dogs to smaller rescues. This makes the work that rescues do and fostering in general so important right now.

Fostering has so many benefits. Not only does it get the dog out of the shelter where, in the case of smaller shelters, they may not have access to adequate veterinary care or may be euthanized, but it allows the dogs' foster caregivers to observe them and learn about any health or behavior issues they may have. That's what makes fostering so crucial according to Bree Kishman of Hope of Deliverance, another local rescue helping dogs in the Tucson area. You can really get to know the dog and learn about any idiosyncrasies that need to be worked on, like learning if the dog is good with kids or cats or does better in a multiple or single dog home. These are things that may not be known while a dog is in a possibly chaotic shelter environment. With fostering, the personality traits of each dog can be understood and that's important when it comes to placing dogs in their forever homes. Through foster care, the best type of home for each dog can be identified and this increases the chances of them settling in nicely into their new forever home.

Small rescues such as RAD don't receive public funding but operate purely on donations. These donations go toward paying for medical care and food in their network of foster homes. To learn more about becoming a foster dog parent or even just to make a donation, here are just a few local organizations who are making a huge difference in dogs' lives:

How Our Community Fosters Love

Story by Bella Wexler Photos by Candice Eaton

It's not easy to open your home to a stranger, especially during a global pandemic. But these days, many are finding it harder to resist—at least when those strangers walk in on four legs with wagging tails and soulful, “puppy-dog” eyes. In a time when receding into our houses for months is not only socially acceptable, but conditionally mandated, people across the country are rising to the occasion by taking homeless pets with them. Animal rescues are seeing unprecedented waves of foster applications, teenagers are trying their hands at temporary pet parenting, and once overflowing shelter kennels are bare for the very first time.

But why flock to take on the responsibility of a foster pet during such a stressful time? For one thing, animals can provide some much needed comfort in the face of uncertainty. There has undoubtedly been significant societal upheaval as a result of COVID-19, landing much distress on the shoulders of Arizonans these past few months. Teenagers confined to their homes by school closures have found fostering to be an excellent means of combatting boredom and isolation.

This is the case for Shira Dubin, a University High School student who recently took in a foster dog named Luna for three weeks. Shira chose to see her time at home as an opportunity to “be able to take care of a dog’s every want and need”. Having fostered three puppies with her family a few years ago, she was thrilled to spend her extra free time at home caring for Luna. “By fostering and adopting out a dog, you are able to help someone who is maybe going through a hard time or someone who just wants a friend,” Shira notes. It is sad for Shira to watch her foster pets leave once they have been adopted, “but the happiness shines so brightly that it makes you want to do it over and over again,” she says. It is an incredibly rewarding experience on both ends.

Shira Dubin isn’t the only teen with her hands full of Summer foster pets. Lily

Wexler is a 19-year-old University of Arizona student who has been fostering pets since she was very young. When the COVID-19 pandemic made it too dangerous for her to return to her Summer job as an advocate for campers with special needs at the Jewish Community Center, Lily chose to take on a new job from her bedroom. Lily welcomed a pregnant foster dog named Olive through the local In the Arms of Angels pet rescue. Within a few weeks, Olive had given birth to six puppies that Lily had been caring for until they were eight weeks old and ready to find a forever home. “It’s a lot of work and it’s stressful,” Lily admits, “but having this responsibility definitely helps me learn and grow as a person”. Lily also struggles with anxiety and finds that devoting herself to foster care during this pandemic has really lightened her mood.

Many others have applied to foster at this time to mitigate the impact of the pandemic on shelter and rescue systems. Animals in foster care through The Animal League of Green Valley used to make up a very small portion of the shelter’s pets. Only a handful of dogs and very few cats (excluding the occasional young litter) were ever fostered before being adopted according to organization president, Kim Eisele.

Once the pandemic hit, however, the shelter was swarmed with two to three times the number of foster applications that they normally saw. These offers from concerned members of the community came in addition to those of regular shelter volunteers. In fact, the attention was so overwhelming that TALGV found themselves turning people away. “Unfortunately, we did not have enough dogs to fit all of their desires,” says Eisele, “but the outpouring of love to help our animals was very exciting”.

As an avid foster parent herself, Kim Eisele knows firsthand how significant the benefits of lending one’s home to an animal in need can be. On the one hand, “it is extremely gratifying”. She and her husband fostered a litter of kittens for eight weeks once, finding the experience to be a true highlight of their marriage. “Watching them grow and learn and play was so much fun!” she recalls. Her tendency to fall in love with her foster pets and ultimately adopt them has made her somewhat of a “foster failure”, though. To date, she has adopted five of her prior fosters: two dogs and three kittens.

Besides the irresistible affection that fostering brings to the human caregivers, there are also many benefits for the pets, too. Kim Eisele mentions that fostering has been known to have “a very positive impact on the pet’s adoptability”. Spending time in someone’s home provides excellent insight into the animal’s personality, behavioral qualities, and compatibility with different environments, pets, and people.

Take Bo, for example. Bo is a six-year-old, brown spotted pit bull terrier who loves nothing more than a good run, trip to the mall, and eager belly rub. After being returned to the Humane Society of Southern Arizona by his first adopters for not getting along with their other pets, it became clear that Bo would need to find a home wherein he could be the only dog.

Bo was originally brought to the Humane Society of Southern Arizona towards the end of 2019. After receiving some medical care to remedy his injuries from past abuse, Bo met Frank Ribeiro, a volunteer who would become one of his most loyal devotees. Frank immediately fell in love with Bo’s affectionate, energetic demeanor.

Bo faced significant trauma in his life before being rescued, triggering his fear-driven apprehension towards other dogs.

However, compassionate humans in his life have never been the targets of these reactions. Bo was even brought to Ruff House Training and Behavioral Modification to assess his ability to be a thriving and safe household pet. He quickly won over the business owners, Crystal and Michael Blaker. Without other dogs around, Bo was known for happily flopping over at the sight of the Blakers' six-year-old daughter, Lauren, to allow her to smother him with cuddles and pets on his freckled belly. Needless to say, Bo passed the Ruff House Training exams with flying colors.

It was while he was training in this facility that Bo stole the heart of Linda Grissom, his next guardian angel. "I was amazed," Linda said of her first meeting with Bo; "he warmed up to me right away". Linda and her husband Tom are Humane Society donors and all-around animal lovers. She and Frank connected over their shared love of Bo and have since joined forces to advocate on his behalf.

In the absence of any forthcoming foster families who don't already have other dogs at home, Linda and Frank have been working tirelessly to sustain Bo's boarding at Sol Dog Lodge and Training Center. "He actually has a fan club," Linda says in reference to the many Humane Society of Southern Arizona volunteers who pay Bo frequent visits. At Sol Dog, Bo's visitors treat him to some well-needed socialization, long walks, and windowshopping!

Every week, Linda brings him along for a walk at the Tucson Mall to gain more public exposure. Aptly named "Bo's shopping day", Tuesdays are a great time for Bo's curiosity and approachability to shine through. The added exercise has also proven to be a good way to make up for his strong appetite. When Frank brought a steak as a special treat for him, Bo gobbled it up in fifteen seconds flat! Bo is now at a healthy weight, though, thanks to his long walks, playful running, and an occasional visit to the Humane Society of Southern Arizona New Beginnings agility yard!

Bo is an affectionate, energetic dog in need of a full-time foster family or adopter in a one dog household. As shelters and rescues are flooded with eager fosters with specific requests, we must remember the animals in our community who are most desperate, just as Linda and Frank have been doing to provide for Bo this year. Bo is still waiting to be someone's perfect dog and qualifying fosters/adopters should not be deterred by his past trauma and resulting intolerance for other dogs. At the end of the day, Bo has proven to be very loving and deserving of a forever home; it's up to our community to find one for him.

Over the past few months, we have been forced to find unity six feet apart and emotional connectivity through surgical masks. Rather than use social distancing as an excuse to dissociate from others in need, Arizonan animal lovers have used it as an opportunity to connect. We have offered sanctuary to homeless pets at record high rates despite the uncertainties of our own futures; teens like Shira and Lily have remedied anxiety and boredom with volunteer care for animals in need; shelter volunteers such as those at The Animal League of Green Valley have worked tirelessly to continue adoptions and pair foster families with ideal foster pets; and community members like Frank and Linda have refused to allow vulnerable dogs like Bo to be left behind over time.

Social distancing has drawn community values into focus for Arizonans, and at the forefront of these are empathy and patience. We've come a long way to support homeless animals during this time of unprecedented need. But there's still a long way to go. Loving pets like Bo are still waiting for an ideal foster family and forever home. If you haven't already, please open your home to a stranger on four legs. You may be surprised by the life altering connections you can build even while social distancing.

Bo still needs a home, see contact info for Frank Ribeiro to volunteer

Humane Society of Southern Arizona

Here in Tucson it may be nearly autumn but it still feels like the dog days. I don't have to tell you it's been a rough summer in a lot of ways. But no matter how much we are dealing with as a society right now, the good news is that our community has stepped up to support homeless pets like never before.

At the Humane Society of Southern Arizona we take our mission seriously to protect pets and the people who love them, accordingly adjusting how we do business to carry out that mission while keeping everyone safe during the pandemic. We require face coverings for everyone who works at and visits our facilities, limit the numbers of people in our indoor spaces at any given time, sanitize everything, and have moved to adoptions by appointment only at our Roger Road campus.

One might think that would decrease the numbers of pets and people we can serve, but thanks to the creativity and dedication of our staff and volunteers, and the generosity and passion of our donors and the public, we actually found forever homes for more homeless pets in June than in any other June since 2016.

If you would like to provide a loving home for an amazing companion for life, please check out who's waiting for you at HSSAZ.org/adoptions and make an appointment to meet your new best friend by calling 520-327-6088, ext. 173.

Foster Volunteers

Speaking of dedication, our Foster Care volunteers have been coming through for pets big time throughout puppy and kitten season. We've consistently cared for around 150 companion animals in foster care at any given time over the last couple of months, assuring the wellbeing of our most vulnerable pets.

Ariel was found on the streets of Tucson and upon examination we found that she was ready to go into labor at any moment. She gave birth to 6 puppies that night in comfort and safety. This proud mama dog is currently being cared for by a loving HSSA foster family. We couldn't continue to save lives like those of Ariel and her pups without our first-rate fosters. Won't you consider the rewards of hosting a vulnerable dog in your home? For more info on becoming a foster, visit HSSAZ.org/volunteer

Wellness Clinic

Our Wellness Clinic is also working hard to make sure that every pet in our community can get excellent health care, even if their family has fallen on hard times. If you have seen a drop in your income and would like to make an appointment, please call 520-881-0321. We also are continuing to offer low-cost vaccinations and are rolling out our new low-cost dental care for your pet. For more information on those and other services, visit HSSAZ.org/clinic.

Puttin' On the Dog

I know many of you each year look forward to our "Best of Tucson" award-winning annual gala Puttin' On the Dog, the only gala in town where you can bring your dog to share in the fun. You may be aware that the pandemic forced us to initially postpone from April to October. Well, COVID hasn't been fully defeated yet, so in order to assure the safety of our supporters we have made the sad decision to cancel the live event entirely this year.

But don't be too sad - in place of the live event we are planning a fantastic and entertaining socially distant alternative about which we are really excited: an hour-long TV program featuring HSSA and our programs, inspirational pet stories, an amazing auction, celebrity surprise appearances, and great performances from local musicians!

HSSA's "Tail-a-thon" will be broadcast on multiple local TV stations on October 10th and 11th. Based on my knowledge of what's in store, this is really going to be fun, and hopefully will help us recover some of the financial losses our core programs have sustained due to the cancellation of our major annual fundraiser. Mark it in your calendar TODAY and be sure to visit HSSAZ.org/TailAThon for all the details.

Proceeds will benefit HSSA's general operations and the lifesaving Second Chance Medical Fund which really needs our help now more than ever. To learn more and to become a Tail-a-thon program sponsor as a business, please email Christophe at cvalton@hssaz.org. And if you'd like to donate right now to help us in advance, please visit HSSAZ.org/donate

50/50 Raffle

HSSA's first ever 50/50 raffle is happening now, and if you buy a ticket before September 19th, YOU could walk away with a bunch of cash while helping homeless pets. That's right - one lucky winner will split the entire pot with HSSA.

The winner will be announced on September 19th at 4pm. Our generous sponsor Orange Paws started us off with $1,000 and people have been buying a whole lot of tickets already, so the winner will receive thousands! This is a win-win for all. To see how much the total jackpot is right now and to buy tickets, visit HSSAZ.org/raffle before it's too late!

Traveling Miles to Repair a Smile

After five months and three major dental surgeries, and thanks to the help of Cherished Tails Senior Sanctuary, Lilly finds a home.

Story by Emily Dieckman

Lilly was in poor condition when she first came to Cherished Tails Senior Sanctuary (Photo courtesy of Leticia Reyna)

Leticia Reyna's heart broke when she first saw a photo of Lilly, a dog staying at an animal shelter in Hermosillo, Mexico. Lilly was so thin that you could count her ribs, she had worms, and it looked like she had a broken nose. The shelter found her on the street, crying, and it seemed to them her puppies had been taken away from her. Their guess was she was about 8 years old.

Reyna turned to Pauline Haas-Vaughn, the director of Cherished Tails Senior Sanctuary, a Tucson rescue that provides homes for senior dogs and middle-aged dogs with medical conditions, founded in 2017. Pauline agreed to sponsor Lilly's medical bills if Reyna fostered her until she found a permanent home.

Once she made it to the United States, Lilly's situation turned out to be even more complicated than they expected. She was a survivor of distemper, a highly contagious, often fatal viral disease that affects multiple organs. She also had tick fever. The first veterinarian they met took a look at her teeth, and said she was probably only 5 or 6 years old but looked older because of her health issues. But her teeth were also in poor condition, so they did an x-ray.

"What we found out was she basically had no hard palette, and she had all these big huge holes between her nasal cavity and her mouth, so bacteria was getting in and food was getting back and forth," Haas-Vaughn explained. "It was probably the result of the distemper. The distemper really eats away at their teeth and their bones."

They turned to Rocco Mele, a Doctor of Veterinary Medicine at VCA Valley Animal Hospital and Emergency Center, who agreed to take care of Lilly, by removing her teeth and performing surgery to close up the holes in her mouth. Her skin was so fragile and sensitive that one of the holes reopened, so, after she'd healed from her first surgery, she had a second one. Haas-Vaughn said that, while there were times Lilly had less energy than others, she always had a sweet temperament, and got along with other animals and people of all ages.

"She was so sweet through the entire time," Reyna agreed. "It seems like she knew she was in a better place, and she was very grateful. She was nothing but love."

The surgery brought Lilly one step closer to healing, but some of the sutures still weren't closing. Mele, who co-authored the book "Dental Implants for Small Animals" and has spent many years devoted to advanced veterinary dentistry, offered to try out a new kind of dental surgery that he believed would help. The third time was the charm: after five months, three major dental surgeries and about $5,000, Lilly's mouth was healed.

A Garden of Lillys

In the midst of all this, Tucson resident Karen Johnson saw Lilly on PetFinder and fell in love. She and her husband Bob had lost their dog about a year and a half earlier, and they were starting to think they might be ready for a new one. Karen knew exactly which dog she wanted to check out first when they did commit to getting a new one. At their meet and greet with Lilly, Bob fell even harder than Karen did.

"Once we met her, we thought, 'This is our dog,'" Karen said.

Lilly was in between her second and third surgery when they first met her, but they agreed to adopt her, and took her home in late July after her last surgery.

Lilly fit right in at the Johnson's house. In fact, there are several other dogs in their neighborhood named Lilly, so they augmented her name to "Lilly Girl" to avoid confusion. Karen has developed a special method for feeding Lilly: forming her wet food into little balls, like cookie dough, and arranging it around the edges of a plate. This helps Lilly get her narrow muzzle around individual bites and not mush her nose into the food.

Bob loves the way she's become so comfortable around them so quickly, and how she follows Karen around like a shadow. Karen loves waking up in the morning and hearing Bob in the kitchen, making coffee and talking to Lilly Girl.

"I just heard that and thought life is normal. Life is the way it should be. We have our Lilly Girl, and she's part of the family," Karen said. "I wake up and there's joy. There's just pure joy because we have her."

Welcome to Rainbow Bridge

In Memorandum: Many of you have read the story of Rainbow Bridge. It tells the story of where our pets go when they die and how they will be waiting for us to arrive when it is our time. A while ago, we found another version of this story as it relates to the tragedy of September 11th 2001. Welcome at Rainbow Bridge is the true epitome of the loving, forgiving nature of our beloved pets. In Memorandum of all that was lost on 9/11. May we never forget!

Story by Alexander Theodore Bovier

On the morning of September 11, 2001, there was an unprecedented amount of activity at the Rainbow Bridge. Decisions had to be made. They had to be made quickly, and, they were.

An issue, not often addressed here, is the fact that many residents really have no loved one for whom to wait. Think of the pups that lived and died in hideous puppy mills. No one on earth loved or protected them. What about the many who spend unhappy lives tied in backyards? And, ones who were abused. Who are they to wait for?

We don't talk about that much up here. We share our loved ones as they arrive, happy to do so. But we all know there is nothing like having your very own person who thinks you are the most special pup in the Heavens.

Last Tuesday morning a request rang out for pups not waiting for specific persons to volunteer for special assignment... An eager, curious crowd surged excitedly forward, each pup wondering what the assignment would be.

They were told by a solemn voice that unexpectedly, all at once, thousands of loving people had left earth long before they were ready. All the pups, as all pups do, felt the humans' pain deep in their own hearts. Without hearing more, there was a clamoring among them- "May I have one to comfort?" "I'll take two, I have a big heart." "I have been saving kisses forever."

One after another they came forward begging for assignment. One cozy-looking fluffy pup hesitantly asked, "Are there any children coming? I would be very comforting for a child 'cause I'm soft and squishy and I always wanted to be hugged." A group of Dalmatians came forward asking to meet the Firefighters and be their friends. The larger working breeds offered to greet the Police Officers and make them feel at home. Little dogs volunteered to do what they do best, cuddle and kiss. Dogs who on Earth had never had a kind word or a pat on the head, stepped forward and said, "I will love any human who needs love."

Then all the dogs, wherever on Earth they originally came from, rushed to the Rainbow Bridge and stood waiting, overflowing with love to share-each tail wagging an American Flag.

Doggie News

From Around the World

Story by Barbara Berlier

Caught Red Pawed

(facebook)

You cannot blame a dog for trying—and certainly not when they sound super cute. “My significant other and I had been trying to teach our dog to make less of a mess in our house—specifically, to not pull toilet paper off the roll,” wrote Reddit user ringofstones. “We weren’t sure we’d been making any headway until one day we came home to find that while we’d been out, about two feet of toilet paper had been unrolled...and then somehow rolled back up sloppily. All I can imagine is her playing with it happily, hearing us at the door, thinking, ‘Oh, crap!’ and trying to fix her mess. It was actually pretty impressive.”

Walking on Water

(facebook)

“I had a dog that liked to lick the built-up ice in the freezer every time we opened the door,” Reddit user Pondglow wrote. “Got his tongue stuck regularly. Always went back for more.” But that’s is not even the hilarious part.

“The first time we took him to a lake, he got so excited that he just ran in without knowing what it was. ‘Oh, water!’ Okay, not phased. Keeps running toward the middle. We thought he would start to swim. Or at least float. Still, don’t understand how he didn’t. But he ran along the bottom of that lake and just disappeared under the water. ... My dad had to go in and carry him out.”

A Very Punctual Puppy

(facebook)

When Reddit user opkc changed her afternoon routine once, her dog was not having it. “My dog, Libby, rides with me to pick up my kids from school, and she knows exactly what time we leave. The kids had an after-school activity, so I needed to pick them up an hour later than usual. When we didn’t leave at the normal time, she started whining at me. Then barking. Then she swatted my shoe with her paw, hard, so it flew and hit me. She threw my shoe at me!” Libby sounds like a Real Dogwife of New Jersey.

One Hail of a Puppy

(facebook)

Most dogs would do absolutely anything to avoid the hail, but not Reddit user choirboy17’s pup. “The first month I had my dog, Howie, we had a pretty bad hailstorm,” Howie’s owner wrote.

“As soon as it started, I went outside to call him in. ... He ran around for the entirety of the hailstorm trying to dodge the hail, not listening to my command to come inside. He just ran around for 10 minutes and yelped every now and again when a hailstone caught him the right way. Even after it was over, he would not come inside. I didn’t know whether to laugh or cry.”

Embarrassed’ St. Bernard Rescued by Team Of 16 From England’s Tallest Mountain

(AZ Family)

The 121-pound pooch feels “a bit guilty” for letting down the image of her St. Bernard cousins, her rescuers joked.

Daisy the St. Bernard is apparently feeling a little “embarrassed” after she was the subject of a five-hour rescue mission during her descent from England’s highest peak, according to her rescuers.

The 121-pound pooch comes from a working breed that has, for centuries, been known for its prowess in alpine rescues. But on this occasion, it was Daisy who needed saving, after she collapsed while descending from the summit of Scafell Pike in England’s northwest on Friday during a hike with her owners. She was displaying signs of pain in her rear legs and refusing to move, the Wasdale Mountain Rescue Team said in a Facebook post about the mission. After Daisy’s owners contacted authorities, a 16-person rescue team was mobilized to help bring her to safety, armed with medical guidance from local veterinarians.

“On reaching their location, team members carefully introduced themselves to Daisy so as not to cause any additional distress, and with the help of a treat or two members were able to assess her condition and administer analgesia for the pain,” the group wrote.

After “a little persuasion,” some more treats and rearrangement of a stretcher to be more dog-friendly, the rescue team said they were able to carry the St. Bernard down the mountain on a rescue litter, similar to the typical evacuation of an adult person.

Thanks to the cooperation of Daisy, who was “so well behaved” throughout the process, the rescue went smoothly. She “has since been reported to have had a good night’s sleep, snoring a little louder than normal, but back to her usual high spirits this morning,” the rescue group said.

“She apparently feels a bit guilty and slightly embarrassed about letting down the image of her cousins bouncing across the Alpine snows with barrels of brandy around their necks”

True or False, Is Animal Fostering for You?

Story by Rebecca West Photos by Candice Eaton

Hook 8 y/o PACC A#694906

Have you considered animal fostering but you're not quite sure if it's suitable for your particular circumstances? There are a lot of inaccuracies and misconceptions when it comes to the subject, so we've put together a quick quiz to help you sort through the truths and falsehoods behind it. You might be surprised at the results, and hopefully, it leads to your ability to open your humble abode to a deserving animal that desperately needs your help until a forever home comes along.

1. Animal fostering isn't suited for everyone.

The answer is True. You have to be an animal lover for it to work for both you and the pet.

2. Fostering pets is difficult and time-consuming.

The answer to the first part is False, it's really not hard at all. Your biggest output in time and energy is love, and as a pet lover, you'll likely enjoy it. As to the second part, it's only time-consuming if you decide to make it complex, or you choose a special needs pet that frequently requires scheduled medications or complicated feedings. If you're retired or work from home, it shouldn't be an obstacle. If your time is limited, you can still foster an animal without health or behavioral issues.

3. Fostering is expensive and I wouldn't be able to afford it.

False, unless you want to go overboard on fancy toys, bedding, treats, etc. That's up to you, but in general, the basic supplies you'll need to properly care for the animal are provided by many rescue groups, but not all. If finances are a concern, it's vital that you inquire with the group you're debating fostering through. With PACC, for instance, you are responsible for providing food, toys, and a safe environment.

Seline 10 y/o PACC A#635596

4. You'll be paired with whichever animal needs fostering.

False. If puppies or kittens careening around with mom is out of the question, that's not a problem. When you apply to foster you will be asked what your situation is and you can opt to care for an adult animal, or even a senior if you prefer to house a less active pet.

5. A lot of room is required for fostering pets.

Nope, that's False, too. Sure, if you want to take on a Great Dane or an English sheepdog, you'll need a yard to play in and the time to walk the animal. But very often rescue groups need help with smaller pets, those that require a quiet safe space, or senior pets that just want a comfy pillow tucked in a corner to curl up and nap on. Additionally, cats aren't fostered or adopted at near the rate canines are, and they don't require hardly any room at all.

6. Home inspections are rigid and many people don't pass/qualify.

That is predominantly False. While home inspections for fostering and adoptions are thorough, the purpose is to make sure everything you've represented to them in the application is accurate for the sake of the animal and a successful fostering experience. They're not coming out to check your bathrooms or kitchen for cleanliness. They just want to get a feel for you and the atmosphere the pet will be cared for in.

Cozi 5 y/o PACC A#695900

7. Homes with young children are ideal for younger pets.

That is actually False more often than not, but it largely depends on just how young your kids are and their maturity levels. Very small children should not be left alone with pets who are juveniles themselves, for they may inadvertently harm them without intending to. Oftentimes older pets are much more suited to kids for the fact that they're usually more patient and gentler with children, but even they shouldn't be left alone with tots. The rescue you're working with will advise you if your particular situation is a good fit or not.

8. Fostering pets requiring medical attention is on your dime.

Again, that is False. If you're willing to be a caregiver to an animal who is recuperating from an illness or injury and in need of treatment or medications the foster group should be providing that at no charge to you.

Sweet 3 y/o HSSA ID#891064
Needs Fostering

9. Foster parents are responsible for finding adoptive parents.

False. While the facility you're working with will regularly search for ideal candidates, they will also intermittently hold adoption events, where the animals have the best chance of being placed in forever homes. In most cases, you are responsible for transporting them to and from such events, but you're not obligated to attend. Bear in mind that it could take a lot longer to permanently home the animal if you don't.

10. Current household pets must be up to date on vaccines and spayed/neutered.

That's absolutely True. If you have pets and are considering fostering, your household pets must be current on their vaccinations and fixed before you're able to bring a foster animal into the home. This is for everyone's safety.

Be sure to get all of the facts from the groups you're contemplating working with, as guidelines can vary.
